Section C: Reading Comprehension (40%)

This section has ten items, and each correct answer is worth 4%.

Instruction: You will read two passages, A and B. Questions 21-25 are based on passage A, and questions 26-30 are based on passage B.

Passage A: (excerpted from a National Geographic article written by Susan Ager and published on June 13, 2015)

Saturday is the first International Albinism Awareness Day, declared by the United Nations, because 40 years ago a Canadian boy was bullied for having poor eyesight, pale skin, and white hair from a genetic condition as old as humanity.

That boy with albinism survived the taunts and punches. But decades later, Peter Ash saw reports of others who did not survive their attackers. In parts of sub-Saharan Africa, Ash learned, people with albinism are considered ghost spirits, called zero zero or "nothingness." They are thought stupid or evil. They are deemed both less and more than human.

Their body parts are coveted for witch-doctor potions that promise riches, bounteous harvests, and election victories. An albino arm might sell for $4,000 and an entire body—limbs, genitals, ears, tongue and nose—can fetch up to $75,000, according to the International Federation of Red Cross and Red Crescent Societies.

In Tanzania, the first African country Ash visited, he met the family of a 6-year-old girl whose assailants hacked off her arms and her legs, then slit her throat and cut out her tongue.

"My wife and I, fortunate to have done well, had been wondering how we could serve," the Vancouver investor recalls. "When I got to Tanzania, I felt truly called."

He had worked for a time as a minister and counselor before changing his career to commercial real estate investor. But he is now best known as probably the world's leading activist for albinism education, inclusion and protection. By lobbying the United Nations, he helped create International Albinism Awareness Day, which will occur each June 13.

21. Which of the following statement is CORRECT?

- A) The first albino was discovered in Canada 40 years ago.
- B) Albinism is a genetic condition that exists only in Canada.
- C) The United Nations first became aware of albinism 40 year ago.
- D) Albinos have poor eyesight, pale skin, and fair hair.
- E) Albinism only exists in boys.

Passage B: (excerpted from a New York Times article written by David Brooks and published on June 12, 2015)

Every society has its rites of passage, marking the transition from youth to adulthood. Most of these rites of passage are ritualized and structured, with adult supervision and celebration. But the major rite of passage in our society is unrationalized, unstructured and unnamed. Most of the people in the middle of it don't even know it is going on. It happens between ages 22 and 30.

The people who endure this rite of passage have often attended colleges where they were not taught how to work hard. As Richard Arum and Josipa Roksa write in their book "Aspiring Adults Adrift," the average student at a four-year college studies alone just over one hour per day. That is roughly half of how much students were compelled to study just a generation ago. (A)

Meanwhile, colleges have become socially rich, stocked with student centers, student organizations, expensive gyms, concerts and activities. As Arum's and Roksa's research demonstrates, academic life is of secondary or __ (28) __ importance to most students. Social life comes first. (B) Students experience college as a place to meet other people and learn to build relationships.

When they leave campus, though, most of those social connections and structures are ripped away. Suddenly fresh alumni are cast out into a world almost without support organizations and compelled to hustle for themselves.

These twenty-somethings live in a world of radical freedom, flux and insecurity. Surveys show they are very pessimistic about the state of the country, but amazingly optimistic about their own eventual destiny. (C) According to the Clark University Poll of Emerging Adults, 86 percent agree with the statement, "I am confident that eventually I will get what I want out of life."

(D) They are largely unattached to religious institutions. Two-thirds report that they are not politically engaged. Half the students in Arum's and Roksa's recent study reported that they lacked clear goals or a sense of direction two years after graduation.

Yet they are not sure they want to rush into adulthood. (E) As Jeffrey Jensen Arnett and Elizabeth Fishel write in "Getting to 30," "The value of youth has risen, and the desirability of adulthood has dropped accordingly. Today's young people expect to reach adulthood eventually, and they expect to enjoy their adult lives, but most are in no hurry to get there."

One way they cope is by moving back home. A third of the graduates in the Arum and Roksa sample were living at home, levels roughly double the share of grads living at home in the 1960s. Three-quarters of 18- to 25-year-olds who were not living at home received financial assistance from their parents. American parents provide an average of $38,000 in assistance to their young adult children.

26. What would be a good definition of the expression "rites of passage"?

- A) Supervised architectural works.
- B) Pathways between cities or countries.
- C) Rights of way in designated areas.
- D) Ceremonies indicative of moving from one phase of life to another.
- E) Dance rituals that teenagers have to learn before going to college.
